TEEN GUIDES TO HEALTH AND WELLNESS

GENRE	CHILDREN'S NON-FICTION
AGE RANGE	LOWER TO UPPER SECONDARY
CURRICULUM	PDHPE
IMPRINT	MASON CREST
ARRP	$39.99
FORMAT	HARDBACK, 96 PAGES, 228x165mm

The teen years are all about figuring out who you are now, who you want to become, and how you want to relate to the rest of the world. That process involves making your own decisions and, sometimes, your own mistakes. But teens are still kids, more or less—their still-developing brains aren't always qualified to assess the potential consequences of important decisions they face. This paradox can be worrying when it comes to weighty issues that confront teens in our modern world, such as drug use, school violence, and self-harm. Guides to Health and Wellness is a no-nonsense information resource for the most important health questions.

- accessible, down-to-earth language
- packed with information and "actionable advice"
- topics include: Anxiety and depression, nutrition and exercise, tattoos and other body modifications, alcohol and drugs, dating and sexuality, and much more.

"Wonderful, Sadiq," said Mr. Kassim. "Another idea to help Al-Aqsa might be hosting a bake sale to raise money. Or you could run a school-supply drive for the students."

"What if we don't raise enough money?" asked Zana.

"Even small donations will help," Mr. Kassim said. "I hope you all can get involved in some way with this effort."

Zana, Maryam, and I could host an iftar, Sadiq thought. I bet it would raise a lot of money.

Sadiq raised his hand. "Yes, Sadiq," said Mr. Kassim. "My baba says it's to become better Muslims," said Sadiq. "Tasting helps us think about other people. They may not have food like we do."

That gave Sadiq an idea. "Hayo, could you make samosas for the Space Club to sell at the Spring Festival this weekend?" he asked.

"OK, Sadiq, but I need your help! Samosas are a lot of work," Hayo said. "I'll help!" Sadiq said.

The day before the Spring Festival, Sadiq, Aliya, and his mother went grocery shopping. They bought ingredients for samosas. Sadiq picked out his favorite fillings—ground beef, bell peppers, cilantro, onions, and carrots.

When they got home, Sadiq and Aliya set up their cooking stations.
